World Arts Day at Denver Center for International Studies

DENVER – On May 8, World Arts Day, at Denver Center for International Studies, expect to be amused! Bring your Big Top Giggles and Gigantic Eyes of Wonder and prepare to oooh and aaaah and clap your hands off – Everyone Welcome – at a free, World Circus performance and the unveiling of Our World Community mural from 3 to 6pm at DCIS located at 574 W. 6th Ave.

A gaggle of clowns, trapeze artists, singers, comics, jugglers and jesters will show off the skills they’ve learned and perfectionated. You’ll be amazed by music, poetry, dance, singing, Karaoke, drums and food by the likes of: Dr. Razzamataz, Stevarino the Mediocre Escape Artist, Victor the Animal Tamer, the Guerilla Clown Gang and Ivan the Strongman.

Graduate circus folk will perform and distract the audience from all their cares and worries while allowing the new kids on the block to show off their International Circus-y skills.

World Arts Day will also be the Ribbon-Cutting Extravaganza for the Too-Big-to-Not-Be-Noticed unveiling of the school’s mural project created by students from the Art Street After School Programs at DCIS.

The simply amazing, extra-ordinary programs were themselves created and run by Arts Street, a nonprofit organization that provides skilled students and professionals to teach arts classes for youth at schools and other public entities.

Arts Street also provides job training to young adults in creative arts and visual technology.
